Pegasus 1987

DATE DUE

Demco, Inc. 38-293

In Greek mythology, Pegasus was the winged horse offspring of the sea foam of Poseidon and the blood of Medusa, who was slain by Perseus. Through the ages, Pegasus has symbolized imagination, inspiration, intellect, knowledge, science, understanding, and wisdom.

In 1974, Dean Miller chose the image of Pegasus as the symbol of the College.

The past year has found the Mississippi State University College of Veterinary Medicine undergoing a struggle to ensure its continued existence. In January 1986, the Board of Trustees of the Institutions of Higher Learning proposed that several state-supported schools be closed, among these the College of Veterinary Medicine. As a result of the proposal, tremendous energy was expended in an effort to gain recognition for the College's previous, as well as ongoing, contributions to the state. The school was also forced into a process of intense self-examination. During the period of doubt, one person never lost sight of our reason for being: Dean Billy C. Ward. Always ready to "think positive," Dean Ward served as an inspiration for many when the possibility of closure seemed so real.

In January 1987, Dean Ward left the College to assume responsibilities as Vice President of Administration in the office of MSU President Donald Zacharias. Although no longer directly associated with the College of Veterinary Medicine, his ideas and positive mind-set continue to be felt by all. It is to him that this Pegasus is dedicated.

A native Texan, Dr. Ward was born in the city of Phillips in 1941. He graduated from Texas A&M University with a Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree in 1964 and then studied for a Ph.D. in Comparative Pathology at the University of California at Davis. He served as Commissioned Officer (Lt. Cmmdr.) in the U.S. Public Health Service from 1967-1968 where he was Chief of the Pathology Section in the Bureau of Radiological Health. He held a faculty position at Oklahoma State University from 1969-1973, later moving to Washington State University. While in Washington, he was Acting Director for the Washington State Animal Disease Diagnostic Laboratory and served the U.S. Army Veterinary Corps Liaison. He achieved Diplomate status in the American College of Veterinary Pathologists in 1969; only one year later, he attained the same status in the American College of Laboratory Animal Medicine.

Dr. Ward came to Mississippi State University in 1977 with the rank of Professor. Always closely associated with academic innovation, he has at one time served as a Chairman of each phase of the curriculum. In addition to his scientific publications, he has authored numerous articles and given countless presentations regarding alternative teaching modalities for veterinary students. As a result, the College of Veterinary Medicine at MSU is nationally recognized as a pioneer in the field of veterinary education.

Dr. Ward, we wish only the best for you and appreciate what you gave us: your best.

From the Dean's Office . . .

Like all of you, and in fact all of the world, I am a person in transit. My time in the College of Veterinary Medicine is more nearly synchronized with that of the seniors as they and I are relative "short termers" expecting to depart these hallowed halls about mid-spring.

Dr. Jack J. Stockton
Interim Dean, Spring 1987

Depart, but not forget! How could we forget something that has been so intimate and contributory to our lives. Be sure that as we leave, we take much with us which has changed us and which is now a part of us. Memories are long, especially pleasant and not so pleasant ones. Sentiment embellishes the former and reason modifies the latter.

To the seniors, may the enthusiasm and desire which you brought to this place four years ago remain with you always. And may the covenant which you make to feel and demonstrate reverence for all life grow deeper with experience and time. Support your alma mater in all ways possible. It is now a part of you and you a part of it.

To those who remain to complete the task of qualifying for entry into a proud and wonderful profession, be assured the goal is worth the effort. Add to the stature of this University and this College; they deserve your loyalty and love.

To all of you, thanks for allowing Naomi and me to share a part of your lives and, Godspeed!

Jack J. Stockton

Dr. Billy C. Ward
Dean, 1984 - December 1986

Since this is likely to be the last time I will be asked to write in the Pegasus Yearbook, I appreciate the opportunity as a departing Dean to share a few thoughts with you.

First, let me say to all of the students of the College of Veterinary Medicine what a privilege it has been to serve as your Dean. In times of difficulty, you have all been a source of comfort and strength to me.

Take care of the animals. Veterinarians have a unique calling to watch over the health and well-being of the beasts of the world, large and small. It is easy to forget this most primary responsibility and to become inured of the pain and discomfort of these creatures which depend upon us.

In a like manner, be sympathetic to those who love animals. It will be tempting at times to ridicule individuals who appear to be overly affectionate of animals, and whose values in regard to the relative worth of animals and humans seem somewhat distorted. Work to develop a sense of reverence, understanding and compassion for all living things, animals and human beings.

Enjoy your chosen profession. Help make it better. Apply the knowledge you learn here in a useful manner and don't forget to continue to learn.

Even though my work at the present time seems far away from veterinary medicine, I am proud to be a veterinarian. I hope someday when you and I are in the twilight years of our service, we can look back on our careers and know we made the right choice when we entered into the profession.

This is my wish for each one of you.

Billy C. Ward

Dean's Pegasus Faculty Awards are evaluated on exceptional service to the College in the areas of : research, teaching, clinical service, diagnostic service, and extension service. The faculty member must have worked at the College for one full year. The 1986 award winners are Dr. Philip Roudebush for his contribution and excellence in Academics; Dr. Wayne Groce for his outstanding excellence in the Clinics and Field Work; and Dr. Tom Lester for achievement and excellence in the area of Research. Congratulations!

Solve the pet nutrition puzzle with Hill's.

You probably know Hill's is a major resource for veterinary funding, grants and research. We can also be your resource for information on nutrition and disease conditions.

Let us help you. Every week, veterinarians in our Topeka office take scores of calls answering practitioners' questions about pet nutrition and medicine. You can also consult with our veterinary staff about patients and clients.

Let us be a partner in making your practice of veterinary medicine the best it can be. You may also want to add dietary management with Prescription Diet and Science Diet pet foods.

The solution to a pet nutrition puzzle is just a phone call or a letter away. Call toll free 1-800-255-0449. Or write Hill's Pet Products, Inc., P.O. Box 148, Topeka, Kansas 66601.
