Camp Wood Feb. 9th 1862

Dear Mother,

What is the matter with you that you do not write. It must be a month if not more since I heard from you. You cannot plead that you have no tidings from me and I hope you do not think the anxiety all upon your side. We are still here in the old place and doing little beside making ourselves comfortable. There is no excitement here of late and news are pretty scarce. Lowe's balloon has been sent for and Major Stevens has promised to use his efforts to procure me a passage. I have no doubt that he will be successful and I look forward to it with considerable anticipation. A journey in mid-air would furnish material for quite a lively Censor article. Well, how do you all get on at Forestville - what news have you to relate - what births deaths and marriages have occurred, Aunt Jane is perfectly well and is now doing full duty,

He looked pretty thin for some time but is now fat as a woodchuck. Bob McKinstry is hale and hearty and I expect him over to dine with me to day. The health of the regiment is good and I hear but few complaints of any kind.

I have never felt better in my life and have at last recovered all the strength and all the activity which I lost in Mexico. I feel ready for a campaign, but it will probably be six or eight weeks before business gets very lively. The fact is we are all blockaded "by the powers of mind" we are. I must say that I am really enjoying myself and why shouldn't I when

I have good society, good reading, club meetings, and chess, to while away the time. For extras we have now and then a plum pudding or a plate of flapjacks and these are not very expensive. I have a strong suspicion that Col. Taylor is trying to get us transferred from Sickles Brigade - an account of the hard name the other regiments bear. I hope that it will be done for Sickles hangs upon our necks like a millstone.
Taylor is a fine officer and has a high reputation. I have got a pretty large stock of clothes and I mean to send some home just before we march. I can spare a good jacket which will last Frank a year and a pair of pants which want a new seat and will then wear a long time. I can also spare a very fine rifleman's blouse and a couple of pairs of linen pant and still have two full suits left - all that I want to march with.

I calculate to keep two suits by me of good whole clothing so that I may never be left destitute by being ordered to march when I have only oldish clothing on hand.
Thus I shall always keep neat and instead of throwing away clothing when it is still good for considerable, I will send it home where it can do long service in the every day work of farming.
I cannot get a stamp and shall have to let you pay the postage. Money is not lacking but stamps are scarce.
Give my love to all

Your affson

Arthur
