Lloyd-Ricks-Watson Building

Built in 1929, the Lloyd-Ricks-Watson building is one of the historic landmarks on Mississippi State campus. This is the first renovation done to the building since the addition of the east wing in 1939. The building bears the name of the three men who served both as director of the Experiment Station and Extension Service, Edward R. Lloyd Jr., James R. Ricks, Vance H. Watson.

Watson's name is being added to the building by the state legislature in recognition of his 42 years of service to the university. Watson held numerous other positions at MSU including interim president, vice president for the Division of Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Medicine and dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

The Lloyd-Ricks-Watson building is home to the School of Human Sciences and the Department of Agricultural Economics.
